

At its Annual Meeting on April 14, 2005, the Connecticut State Conference of the American Association of University Professors adopted this resolution by acclamation:

"The Connecticut Conference of the American Association of University Professors expresses its sympathy with and support of the graduate students at Yale University who are seeking their right to bargain collectively for their compensation and associated benefits. We urge our colleagues on the Yale faculty to encourage their students and assistants to secure the rights so long denied them by the university administration."
